Chapter 1 by Jalinn Brisbane

All I hear are rain drops...I feel the cool, wet sensation on my face, tears blending in with it. All I can think about is what did I do wrong? Why did they do this to me? My cell phone rings with a slight vibration and I race to answer it hoping its them...its Kelly, my girlfriend, the reason why I am in this situation now. I put it to my wet, dripping ears and she says, "Ciara, what happened! Were are you I'm coming to get you right now". I reply still in shock, "How could they do this to me? What did I do wrong?" She repeats her first question again and I tell her, "on the street, a little down from my parent's house." I start to cry harder. "Why?" Kelly replies, "I don't know babe, I'm coming to get you and we will figure everything out, ok?" I say "Ok" with a heavy sob and hang up the phone.

A few minutes later I see a grey volvo wagon drive towards me and stop. Kelly rushes out of the car and hugs me. She says "I don't care what your stupid parents think, I love you and that's all that matters. You can stay with me and my older brother."

I ran with her to the car, legs weak and slightly shaking. She puts a dry towel over me to warm me up and I sit in the car. We ride for a few minutes quiet and all I hear is the violent knocks of water against the windows shield. "So why are your parents so hateful now that you like girls?" "You are still the same freaking person and it shouldn't matter!" I agreed with a slight nod and said "I don't know, I thought they would just treat me the same, not like an unwanted child."

Then they shouldn't even were at her house, I got out

snuck out at night but it seems so long ago
